WORK HISTORY SUMMARY

Prior to her role as CEO, Michelle spent over 12 years working for a top Fortune 100 global company in various fields of human resources. Michelle began her career as a participant in a two-year entry level leadership development program. Upon completion of the program, Michelle quickly accelerated through the HR organization working as a Senior HR Business Consultant, Learning Consultant, and then a Talent & Leadership Development Account Manager. She was seen as a valued HR partner to her business leaders as she could translate the complexity of an organization's operational goals into HR strategic plans and talent strategies that delivered business results.

Michelle has a proven track record in designing and managing leadership/high potential development programs; facilitating organization restructures and implementing change management strategies; identifying and developing high potential talent; conducting skill gap analysis and designing learning solutions and training curriculums; managing performance systems and processes; facilitating leadership development trainings; facilitating team building workshops and events; and driving culture change.

In 2015, Michelle took a leap of faith to pursue her passion of helping people find fulfillment in their work. She leverages her years of corporate experience in leadership development, change/transition management, and training to design innovative strategies to help her clients (individuals and companies) achieve their goals.
